Thanks for picking up the Farm Guide!

Use this publication to get to know and support the farmers who are the foundation of Washington's thriving food culture. Find local farms, farm products, farm activities and farmers markets. Discover a great U-Pick berry farm, a destination farm stand, lavender fields in bloom, a farm festival getaway, the perfect CSA, humanely raised grass-fed meat or a farm school cooking class. Learn which farms are using sustainable practices, and which farmers are behind your favorite local foods.

We all eat, every day. It is one of our most basic human rights. When you use the Farm Guide, you ensure that the farmers and farm businesses we rely on to feed us are also healthy.

About Tilth Alliance

For nearly two decades, the Farm Guide was published by Cascade Harvest Coalition's Puget Sound Fresh program. Today, Tilth Alliance publishes the Guide after a merger in 2016 of Cascade Harvest Coalition, Seattle Tilth and Tilth Producers.

Tilth Alliance puts nourishing food and sustainable farming front and center across Washington State. Together farmers and eaters, gardeners, cooks and environmental advocates help more people have access to nutritious food and that is grown in a way that supports the environment. With the new Tilth Alliance, our state for the first time has an organization addressing the needs of a healthy and sustainable food culture – growing, eating and everything in between.

Take a class, volunteer at our gardens and farms, and attend fun community events throughout the year. How to Use this Guide

Farms and farmers markets are arranged alphabetically by name within each county, starting with farmers markets, followed by farms. The Quick Search Guides on pages 4–7 provide page numbers and "at-a-glance" information for each listing.

Food Access and Nutrition Incentive Programs

EBT

SNAP benefits (Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, the program formerly known as food stamps) are available through EBT cards (electronic benefits transfer) which work just like a regular debit card. You'll also see individual farms with this icon throughout the Guide, which means they accept EBT at their market locations. There are also several CSAs which now accept EBT.

FRESH BUCKS

This term describes incentive programs which provides SNAP/EBT shoppers at farmers markets with extra buying power. Although the programs can be called different names, and the incentive can vary at participating markets, what they all have in common is that by using your EBT card, you get a match to purchase more fresh food, typically fruits and vegetables. Additionally, a few markets match WIC and Senior FMNP checks. Get the details on farmers market EBT matching programs at wafarmersmarkets.com.

FMNP

There are two federal Farmers Market Nutrition Programs (FMNP): Women, Infants and Children FMNP and Senior FMNP that provide locally grown fruits and vegetables through farmers markets and farmstands to WIC participants and low-income seniors.

CSA Directory

CSAs (Community Supported Agriculture) foster a mutually beneficial relationship between you and a farmer.

By offering "shares" of seasonal harvests, the farm benefits from your financial support while you reap the rewards of good food, grown with care.

There is no substitution for knowing who grows your food and how it is grown. CSAs provide a unique opportunity to build a deep connection between consumers and growers and sustain local agriculture.
